Background:

CIS safety awards are based on a Total Time-Loss-Index rating known as DART (Days Away, Restrictions and Transfers). DART was created by OR-OSHA and is based on trends of more than 200,000 employee hours — and if those injuries and illnesses were severe enough to warrant Days Away, Restrictions and Transfers.

Cities that have no time-loss injuries receive a Gold award. Most smaller-sized cities in Groups 1-3 have zero Total Time Loss Injuries, while larger cities, Groups 4, 5, and 6, have more employees that work hundreds of thousands of hours. It's unrealistic for larger cities to have zero total time loss injuries, therefore, CIS provides Gold awards to cities that have the lowest total time-loss-injury rating.

If a city has less than a Total Time Loss Index of 3.64, they qualify for a Silver award. For cities with a total time-loss-index between 3.65 to 7.27, they're eligible for a Bronze award. Anything higher than a 7.27 and they do not qualify for an award.

The benchmark for a city to qualify for a Bronze or Silver award is to amass at least 55,000 total work hours before a loss time injury occurs to an employee.
